Today I participated in an International Relations Committee hearing on the U.N. oil-for-food scandal. The testimony was astonishing. Some $4 billion dollars vanished into the haze of corruption surrounding this program. The most provocative testimony came from Claudia Rosett whose same day op/ed in the Wall Street Journal appears below. Chairman Henry Hyde, as usual, is pushing for the truth. The American people (who provide more than 20% of the funding for the UN) deserve no less.

Click here for a great commentary from the Wall Street Journal on this issue.