U.S. Congressman Mike Pence released the following statement today in support of the economic plan proposed by House Republican Leader John Boehner (R-OH):

“The American people know that the economic policies of Washington Democrats are failing, and they’re looking for a new approach. House Republican Leader John Boehner is offering a new way forward: fiscal discipline in Washington and tax relief for all Americans. It is my earnest hope that Congress will move quickly and in a bipartisan way to act on Leader Boehner’s call to cut all non-security spending back to 2008 levels and reject raising taxes on any American on January 1, 2011. These are necessary first steps that Washington can take to counteract the failed policies of more taxes, borrowing and stimulus spending.”
