Congressman Pence talked with FOX News' Bill Hemmer regarding the economic stimulus bill that Democrats unveiled today:

Hemmer*: You say no more bailouts, I understand that—but do you consider the stimulus package a bailout?*

Pence*: Well look, the American people know we can't borrow and spend or bail our way back to a growing economy. Not only did the Senate yesterday make it possible for the other half of the bailout to go, but now House Democrats have come forward with a plan that really seems to confirm their belief that a modest amount of tax rebate checks combined with an enormous amount of government spending is the cure for what ails this economy.*

Republicans disagree. We believe that the strength of America is found in the resources, the ingenuity of the American people and we need across-the-board tax cuts for businesses, family farmers, and families to make it happen.
