Read more about it, HERE .

Indiana Congressman Mike Pence, a former broadcaster, is now working to pass the Broadcaster Freedom Act, which would ensure the Fairness Doctrine never returns. His efforts have been stalled, however, by the Democratic leadership of the House. Pence is trying to gather enough signatures on a discharge petition, which would force an up or down vote on the Broadcaster Freedom Act this fall. Pence has 196 of the 218 signatures he needs to force a vote, but no Democrats have yet signed on. Odds are that even those Democrats who are sympathetic won't buck the leadership before November's election.