...found in today's Pittsburgh Tribune-Review :

But the public should do everything in its power to drive a wooden stake through its heart. The Fairness Doctrine is evil disguised as goodness. It's fair in the same way the communist Chinese government is fair about airing various points of view at Tiananmen Square. No one gets to speak his mind. The government's doctrine ensures that no one voice dominates that public forum.