

The Ball State Daily News has more coverage of Congressman Pence's speech to an international relations class at BSU :

Political science professor Francine Friedman said the presentation was engaging to the students and not too technical or intimidating. "It was very interesting, very timely," she said. "It was pitched at a level that students could respond to and understand." There was also a press conference

today on the Cannon House Office Building Terrace where Congressman Pence joined other Members of Congress and global leaders in the fight to combat AIDS. An excerpt of the Congressman's statement:

"We must ensure that America's commitment to fighting the HIV/AIDS pandemic in Africa and around the globe will continue, and continue in a manner that best reflects the nature of America's compassion and its devotion to saving lives, and we intend to fight the objectionable proposals in the Democrat reauthorization bill so that a clean reauthorization bill can be passed by Congress and sent to the President."
